About Shawmut Equipment

George J. O'Connell founded Shawmut Equipment Company, Inc. in 1957 as a crane distributor in Connecticut and Western Massachusetts. Today, the company represents all the brands of the Manitowoc family of cranes – Manitowoc, Grove, National and Potain – as well as a variety of utility equipment. We serve our customers from four locations in New England and the Maritime provinces of Canada. Shawmut's facility locations include Manchester, Connecticut, South Easton, Massachusetts, Saint John, New Brunswick and Elmsdale, Nova Scotia.

In 1978, George's son, David O'Connell, became president of the company. David's sons, Brian and Kevin, and David's nephew, Joe Vergoni, joined the family business in the early 2000s. All three members of the third generation serve as vice presidents and sales representatives.

We are proud of our many long-time employees who have worked hard for the company for decades. John Evans, our Parts Manager, joined the company in 1988. Pam Cothran, the General Office Manager and Controller, has been working to make Shawmut's operations run smoothly since 1987. Several of Shawmut's technicians have been helping customers keep their cranes up and running for many years.

Shawmut has a close group of employees who are dedicated to taking care of our customers by providing crane owners with everything they need from new cranes to parts to expert technical assistance. The brands that Shawmut represents can be relied on for dependable performance all day, every day, and our service and parts departments are always available to address any problem.
